

An Examination on the Employee Participation System in China

Institution: Faculty of Law

The Name of Supervisor: Wang Huai Yu

The Name of Student: Yu Jia

Nov. 2009

Abstract.....5

Chapter One: Introduction.....1

1.1 Opening Remarks.....1

1.2 Literature Review 12

1.2.1 The Concept of Employee Participation.....13

1.2.2 The specific studies of the worker participation in China 14

1.3 Major Objectives 23

1.4 Research Questions 23

1.5 Methodology 24

1.6 Scope and Limitation 24

1.7 Chapter Organization 24

Chapter 2 the Legal Study of Application of Co-determination on China’s Board levels:
Revoking the Employee-Supervisor, Strengthening the Employee-Directors, and Restricting the Co-determination right.....26

2.1General introduction of Chinese Board-level Representation: the legal framework and practice.....28

2.2Revoke the institution of employee-supervisor and improve the institution of employee-director: the comparisons of corporate governance between China and Germany.....31

2.3 The negative influences caused by the Co-determination: hindering the development of Chinese securities market and increasing the cost of collective decision making.....43

2.3.1 The ‘Co-determination’ will hinder the development of Chinese Securities Markets: the comparisons of ownership and securities market between China and Germany.....43

2.3.2Co-determination will Raising the Cost of Collective Decision-Making.....45

2.4 Some Proposals to Balance the Power Allocation between Employee-Director and Management 48

2.4.1 Limiting the Rights of Co-determination with the Commercial Decision-making and Reinforcing the Function of Supervision of Employee-Director 48

2.4.2 Recognizing directors’ fiduciary duty to employee participation: useful experiences from the United States 51

2.5 Conclusions 54

Chapter 3 How to strengthen the control right of Chinese trade union under the “organized dependency”.....55

3.1 The Organized Dependency of Trade Union in Chinese Corporate Governance: from the Traditional State-Owned-Enterprise to the Modern Non-SOEs.....57

3.1.1 Chinese trade union under the traditional model of State-Owned Enterprises Governance (1950s-1984).....57

3.1.2 Chinese trade union under the modern corporate governance (1992-present) : the continuing “organized dependency” leads to the erosion of trade union in SOEs and non-SOEs.....	61

3.2 The current legislative stipulations concerning the participatory models of trade union: the legislative drawbacks and reform proposal.....	66
3.2.1 Trade Union Participate in the Strategy-Making on the Level of Enterprise....	67
3.2.1.1 General Legislative Stipulations of Trade Union in the strategic-making in all types of Chinese enterprise: the 2005 Company Law, the P.R.C. wholly Foreign-Owned Enterprise and the Sino-Foreign Equity Joint Ventures	67
3.2.1.3 The role of trade union in the Strategy-Making and Corporate Governance: monitoring the management and preventing the “Inside Control”.....	73
3.2.2 China’s Trade Union Participate in the Collective Bargaining	75
3.2.2.1 General introduction about Collective Bargaining: the concept, functions and union’s role in corporate governance	75
3.2.2.2 The Chinese legislative framework on collective bargaining.....	77
3.2.2.3 The current legislative drawbacks of collective bargaining institution and reform proposals	78
3.3 Conclusions	81

Chapter 4: The Status of Worker Congress in the Corporate Governance Structure: Rethinking Its Nature, Functions, and Rights	83
4.1 The History of Chinese Worker Congress: From the Planned-economy system to the Socialist Market System.....	85
4.2 Changing the Nature and Limiting the Powers of Worker Congress: Useful Experiences based on the Works Council in European Union	91
4.2.1 General Introduction about the Works’ Council	91
4.2.2 Redefining the nature, powers and competence of Chinese Worker Congress:..	92
4.2.3 The reform of China’s worker congress institution will consolidate the Communications and Cooperation among Worker Congress, the Board of Directors and the Supervisory Board	100
4.3 Granting Right of Veto to Worker Congress: Creating relationships of Check and Balances between the Worker Congress and Modern Corporate Governance Structure	102
4.3.1 The Advantages of Granting Voting Right to Worker Congress	102
4.3.2 Granting Right of Veto to Worker Congress: Creating Relationships of Check and Balance among the Worker Congress, the Shareholder meeting, and the Two Boards.....	103
4.4 Conclusions	106
Conclusion.....	109
Bibliography	113